A tumultuous scene took place on Monday, about a quarter before 4 o'clock, at the Royal Museum. The crowd, which was immense, was beginning to depart, when a cry of fire was raised near the entrance of the Grand Gallery. The spectators in consequence hurried to get out, and several persons were thrown down and trampled upon; many ladies lost their shawls and their ridicules; a number of persons were wounded, but fortunately none of them seriously. The cry of fire is supposed to have been raised by thieves.

We are informed that great efforts have been made in the West Ward of Westmorland to form a body of Yeomanry Cavalry, but hitherto without success, though the necessity of the measure, at the present crisis, has been urged from high authority. The inhabitants either do not see the utility of such an association, or shrink from the distinction which has been lately conferred upon the name in a neighbouring county.—Star.

A reform meeting was held on Mondy at Accrington, which passed off quietly.

Yesterday Baron Bulow, Charge d'Affaires of his Majesty the King of Prussia, jointly with Mr. N. M. M. Rothschild in London, being the other half of the sum fixed for the redemption of bonds in the first year, and also the saving of the interest on the 72,000*l.* redeemed on the first of April last.

WARD OF CHEAP MEETING.

That the Inhabitants of this Ward, yielding to none in attachment to the liberty of the subject, and in zealous affection for their Sovereign, viewing with serious concern the systematic propagation of principles, at meetings contrived by the wicked and disaffected, under the pretence of legal discussion, alike dangerous to the Constitution of England, subversive of the good order of Society, and destructive to the mild and beneficient influence of Religion.

That the Inhabitants of this Ward do combine to add strength and energy to the magisterial and general administration of the laws, and to inspire strength and confidence in his Majesty's loyal Subjects, well persuaded that by such source the temporary distresses, with which the people of this country, in common with those of the civilized world, are destined to contend, are more likely to be removed, than by the propagation of discontent, insubordination, and infidelity.

The amended Resolutions were seconded by Mr. Loxley.
